

...means you are a slave who tends to him at night.

LONE

Abide in the Wind

Episode 7 • Dorton

Story • Art

Shin Weol

This isn't a slave collar,

and I don't
attend to him
at night.

I must've
surprised her there.

From her response,
she doesn't seem to be used that way.

Thank
goodness!

Wait, aren't I a little too happy right now?

Is it because this is the first case I've encountered that doesn't conform to the expectations?

It's rude to display such feelings
in front of her. I need to calm down.

Even if it isn't
the truth,

anyone who wears that collar

will draw the same conclusion.

And, that is a problem.

Why did the prince make you his slave?

Do you know why?

I guess I can't expect her to open up to me immediately.

Are you satisfied with your current situation?

Well, the uniqueness of your predicament may require various strategies to bring about change.

If you need
any information
or require any help, please allow me to assist you.

The answer to any problem is always rooted to the cause,
so think carefully.

Mr. Kallon,
why are you
helping me?

Someone once told me to pay no mind to the affairs of slaves

because it would be futile.

It's true that change can only happen
when it affects you and the world —

One person
can only affect the world so much.

Even the efforts of many people are mere droplets in an ocean.

It's easy to give
up. Or, so I think.

Yes.

When I was young, I could get whatever
I wanted.

I was fortunate enough to be born
into a rich and prosperous family

and never know
hunger or the cold.

I didn't understand
the frustration of being unable to do anything.

Something is wrong with this.

It's not that I wish for everyone to be equal –
that's impossible
to achieve.

But everyone should be entitled to the same basic rights and the freedom to choose what to do with their body and mind

However, the government restricted that notion and has stopped so many people from ever having a chance.

Even worse, they
rationalised it saying,

"That's the way it has always been."

And people blindly accept
it as the truth.

Those who sympathize may be small in numbers and directionless.

but if I can reach them, even the slightest bit

I believe that it will not end with just me. Hearts will continue to connect to each other.

And when that happens, this world will have a brighter future.

Maybe then, my life will mean something.

Anyway, that's what I believe

I'm sorry,
it seems that I've talked about myself too much

But there are others who think like me. Just think of it like that, haha.

OPEN

Time's up!
I'll escort the guest out.

Damn...

THE
THE
THE
!

Keep it. I have another one.

If you want
an answer,

you must come
up with a question.

I wish you the best of luck.

Dorton Station

Hey! What's going on?
I told you I had to meet someone.

I've spoken with your superior, too!

The prince has instructed me to see his guest off properly.

Huh,
really now...

STEP
!

Is she finally
going to cooperate?

I need to come up
with a question.

Why is he keeping me here alone?

What is his objective?

What is he planning to do with the Dragon's power?

Where are Kairak
and Mamagi?

MANGA!

But in order to deal with him, the first thing I must do is change the balance of power in our relationship.

I want to know what happened Roy Forte's body after the fire in Middle last spring.

cover <http://sagepub.com/abideinthewind>

blog <http://blog.sagepub.com/abideinthewind>

LONE-MANGA!

Presents...

Chapter 119

Translator - Doge

Proofreader - Marajule

Editor - Hyakki

Abide Dorton in the Wind

